For the International Council of PBI

Rusa Jeremic

I believe that the next year will bring the challenges that face the world and that you, as a member of PBI, are ready to face and meet the challenges of the peace and justice issues.

As a member of PBI, you are part of the international community of legal professionals who work towards the promotion of peace and justice. Your work is essential in supporting the work of PBI and its members in promoting international law and human rights.

I hope that your year will be filled with opportunities and challenges that will enable you to continue your work and contribute to the promotion of peace and justice.

Best regards,

Rusa Jeremic

Laboratory demonstrations throughout the year involved a number of children and engaged the attention of many. The team was also involved in the construction of a new radio tower located at Kandy, providing essential communication services to the community. In September, the PFL launched a new program to support local NGOs in responding to needs in the area.

During the year, the PFL supported the work of the Human Rights Day. Demonstrations were coordinated by NGOs throughout the country, highlighting the need for reconciliation and the importance of human rights. The team made regular visits to high-risk areas, in the hope that an international observer presence might reduce the number of clashes.

The PFL began the year by accumulating evidence and preparing for the next phase.

Political Background

The PFL Project, founded in 1995, is a coalition of community organizations working towards peace in Sri Lanka. During the first four months of 1995, the PFL Project was involved in the monitoring of the ceasefire agreement. The team was also involved in the construction of a new radio tower located at Kandy, providing essential communication services to the community. In September, the PFL launched a new program to support local NGOs in responding to needs in the area.

The North America Project was set up in 1990 to identify and explore the potential of directed growth of national and regional networks. The project involved expanding the potential of directed growth of national and regional networks by involving and training communities and institutions in the process of exploration. The project also focused on providing direction to the communities involved in the project, providing direction to the communities involved in the project, and providing direction to the communities involved in the project.

Ways to achieve change...

Objectives of PBI’s initiatives include education, community development, and justice and peace. PBI’s work is guided by the principle that education, community development, and justice and peace are interrelated. PBI’s initiatives aim to create a culture of peace and justice and to build a community that is sustainable.

Peacemaker courses and workshops are designed to help participants develop skills in conflict resolution and to promote nonviolent methodologies. PBI’s initiatives include training in restorative justice, mediation, and conflict resolution skills. Participants are encouraged to apply these skills in their daily lives and to promote peace and justice in their communities.

In addition to education and community development, PBI’s initiatives also focus on justice and peace. PBI is committed to promoting a culture of peace and justice through initiatives that address issues such as human rights, democracy, and gender equality. PBI’s initiatives are guided by the principle that education, community development, and justice and peace are interrelated and that they should be approached in a holistic manner.

PBI’s initiatives in Haiti are funded by a variety of sources, including government grants, private foundations, and individual donors. PBI’s work in Haiti is guided by the principles of human rights, democracy, and justice.

Times have changed so much for Haiti in the past two years. Despite the challenges, PBI continues to work towards a sustainable and just future for Haiti.

Political Background

Committee: CREDHOS, The Regional Committee on Human Rights, has organized a series of consultations and meetings with representatives of various organizations and individuals to discuss the implementation of international human rights treaties and conventions. The committee has also prepared a report on the situation of human rights in Colombia, which includes recommendations for the government and civil society. The report calls for the implementation of a comprehensive human rights strategy and the strengthening of mechanisms for the protection of human rights defenders.

Background:
The recently elected government of President Iván Duque has made a commitment to advance human rights and promote social inclusion. However, challenges remain, including the ongoing conflict in the country and the need for greater participation of civil society in decision-making processes. The government has taken steps to improve the protection of human rights defenders and to address issues of impunity.

Political Background:
Colombia has a long history of political violence, with conflicts between various armed groups resulting in large numbers of victims. The government has made efforts to negotiate peace agreements with armed groups and to implement measures to prevent human rights violations. However, challenges remain in ensuring the rights of all citizens, especially in rural areas and indigenous communities.
The Balkans Project:

At the beginning of the 1990s, a local NGO was established by local women and men to support victims of war and conflict. The organization, known as the Balkan Peace Team, aimed to promote peace and reconciliation among the different ethnic groups in the region.

Project Work:

The Balkan Peace Team focused on conflict resolution and mediation efforts, working closely with local communities and international organizations. They organized workshops, seminars, and training sessions to build trust and understanding among the various groups.

Strategic Plan:

The Balkan Peace Team's strategic plan for 2020-2022 included the following objectives:

1. Strengthening community-based conflict resolution mechanisms
2. Enhancing the capacity of local NGOs to handle conflict
3. Promoting peaceful coexistence and reconciliation
4. Building partnerships with international organizations

Financial Support:

The project received funding from various sources, including government grants, international agencies, and private donations.

Evaluation:

The project was evaluated through regular assessments, feedback from participants, and impact studies. The evaluation process helped to identify areas for improvement and to adjust strategies as needed.

Conclusion:

The Balkan Peace Team's work has been instrumental in promoting peace and reconciliation in the region. Their efforts have contributed to the reduction of tensions and the fostering of mutual understanding among the different communities.

Regular newsletters and updates are produced to keep members informed of the activities of the network. This includes news on events, workshops, and projects. Members are encouraged to contribute by sending updates to the coordinator or the group representative.

The network meets at least once a year to review progress and plan future activities. Meetings are held in various locations, including New Zealand, the USA, and Canada.

Volunteer recruitment is ongoing, and new volunteers are always welcome. Details on how to apply can be found on the PBI website.

The Emergency Response Network (ERN) is a key component of the network. It focuses on emergency response and coordinates efforts to address urgent situations.
